

RUSSIAN MARITIME REGISTER OF SHIPPING

CODE OF ETHICS FOR RS EMPLOYEES

Each RS employee is to be guided by the following business behavior principles at performance of his/her duties:

- professionalism and competence,
- impartiality and integrity,
- striving to improvement and innovations.

At performing services, RS employees are to:

- act in compliance with RS mission for promotion of safe navigation, safety of life at sea, safe carriage of goods and environmental protection provision,
- provide high level of informational support for RS customers, maintain operative communication with RS customers, enable RS operation 24 hours per day, 7 days per week,
- deny issuance and approval of documents on technical supervision objects compliance with the imposed requirements without performance of relevant surveys, verification, testing and assessments,
- maintain confidentiality of information belonging to RS customers,
- deny lowering of requirements for achieving competitive advantages,
- provide exclusion of any possible corrupt practices, partiality and conflict of interests,
- provide effective cooperation within their competence, including cooperation with other RS branch offices,
- submit proposals for RS activity improvement, basing on work experience and taking into account advanced technology and modern engineering solutions applied in the industry.

All RS personnel commitment to the above principles of corporate ethics is a guarantee of reinforcement of the prestige and image of RS as internationally recognized organization and independent classification society.